CAMBRIDGE UNIVERSITY PRESS TO PUBLISH AMERICAN SOCIETY OF INTERNATIONAL LAW'S JOURNAL PUBLICATIONS BEGINNING IN 2017

WASHINGTON, DC – The American Society of International Law (ASIL) and Cambridge University Press are pleased to announce that beginning in January 2017 Cambridge University Press will publish ASIL's prestigious publications the American Journal of International Law, AJIL Unbound, International Legal Materials, and Proceedings of the ASIL Annual Meeting.

ASIL's flagship quarterly, the American Journal of International Law (AJIL), has been the preeminent journal of international law since 1906. Proceedings of the ASIL Annual Meeting (Proceedings) also have been published for more than a century and provide a vital record of ASIL's annual conference with papers from leading experts and major policy statements by U.S. government and international officials. International Legal Materials (ILM) brings together the most important primary international legal documents with commentary, publishing six issues a year since 1962. AJIL Unbound was launched as an online companion to AJIL in 2014 and provides a forum for timely dialogue on leading AJIL articles, symposia, and shorter topical articles, all written in a way that is equally accessible to academics, students, policymakers, and practitioners.

The partnership between these two leading organizations in international law will give ASIL's journals an advanced online presence and make them more accessible than ever before. It will foster innovative content creation and ensure these important publications continue to set the pace for international law scholarship for many years to come.

ASIL President Lucinda Low said, "This exciting new partnership will enable the Society better to serve its members and ensure that the thoughtful, cutting-edge work our authors do on key international law issues is projected effectively to the broader international community."

ASIL Executive Director Mark Agrast said, "We look forward to partnering with Cambridge to ensure that our publications remain the gold standard in the field and to offer the dynamic and integrated online experience our authors and readers deserve."

Cambridge University Press Director of Publishing Ella Colvin said, "We are delighted to have been selected as ASIL's future publishing partner. Our long experience of publishing creatively for the community and strong digital capability will bring the Society's already extensive reach to an even wider global readership. This is a very exciting collaboration for the Press."
